Integrate ThousandEyes with Event Management by adding a standard webhook in the ThousandEyes console.

What authentication is used

There are two methods of authentication:

- OAuth authentication: Provides enterprise-grade authentication to keep your enterprise environment safe. Authentication is performed using ThousandEyes Monitor V1 or V2 access tokens. For more information, see Integrate ThousandEyes with OAuth authentication.
- Basic webhook authentication: Provides a basic standard of authentication, without the need for ThousandEyes Active Directory. This authentication can be especially useful for distributed small teams, such as SRE or DevOps teams. For more information, see Integrate ThousandEyes with basic authentication.
